

During the month of October, the door was opened again to return to India to continue in our part in life transformative teaching. The photo above is the main campus of the armada of six Rhema Bible Colleges in what will soon be the most populous nation of the world. There are so many experiences that take place in these international travels that are just indescribable. One of them is the sense of destiny and purpose that is experienced during the delivery of my teaching.

This group of students who represent the diverse cultures within this large population was very eager and attentive to each hour of instruction. This campus is a resident program that provides dormitories for men and women from the different states of India.

The Kingdom principles of sowing and reaping, giving and receiving were in motion in the classroom. The Word of God was sown in the soil of the students' hearts and minds. In Biblical proportion some will produce thirty, some sixty, and some one-hundred-fold. We hope that all produce one hundred but even at these varied percentages the magnitude of our investment into these lives will be a great return.

The truth that was sown into them will bring fruit in both personal and ministerial aspects of their lives. Ministry is a product, an overflow of what takes place in one's personal life. It is impossible to deal with either of these separately if a successful minister is to be developed. These students are good ground, and therefore worthy of the investments you have made to prepare them for the work of ministry.

[Mar 4:14, 20 NKJV] 14 "The sower sows the word. ... 20 "But these are the ones sown on good ground, those who hear the word, accept it, and bear fruit: some thirtyfold, some sixty, and some a hundred."

God is faithful to fulfill His Word in and through us as we yield to and commit what we do into His hands. Thank you for your part of the great harvest that these will bring into the Kingdom of God.
